

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

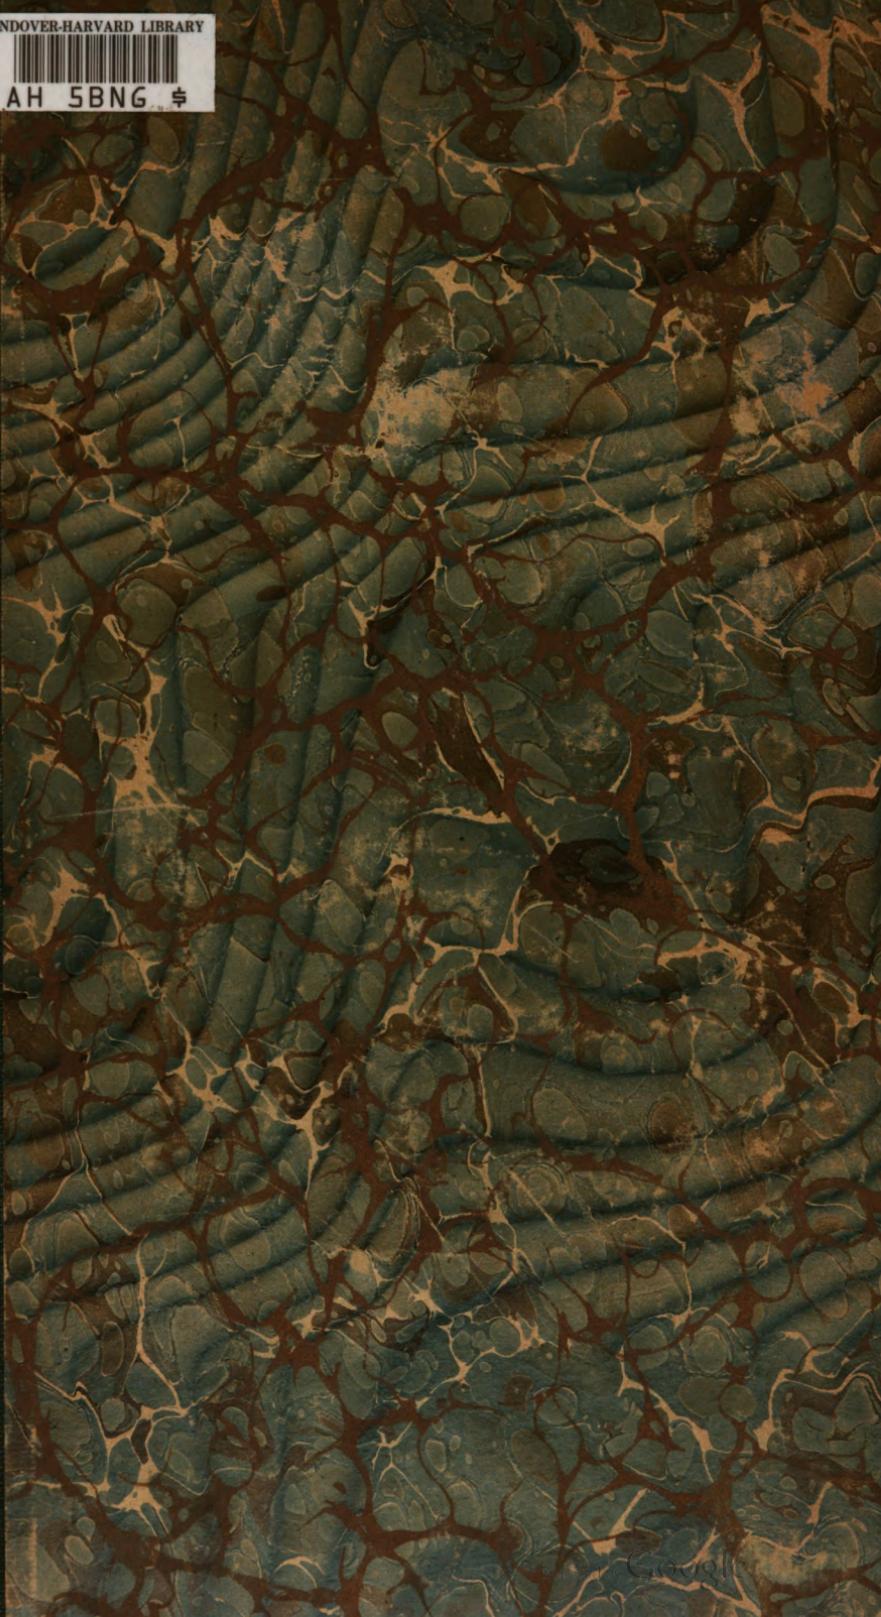

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. THIS Lecture, delivered in the session of 1849, is a sequel to those on the Nyāya Philosophy delivered to the senior class of pupils in the English Department of the Benares College, in 1848, "with the view of introducing them to the philosophical terminology current among their learned fellow-countrymen the pandits."

For selecting the Tattwa-samāsa as the text-book, there were two motives—the simplicity of its arrangement, and the extreme rarity of the work. Mr. Colebrooke (at p. 233. vol. 1st of his Essays) speaks of it as being uncertain whether the work were still extant; and few of the pandits appear to know it except by name.

A LECTURE ON THE SANKHYA PHILOSOPHY.

No. 1.—[THE founder of the Sánkhya school of philosophy was Kapila. Two treatises are attributed to him—the Sánkhya-pravachana and the Tatwa-samása. The latter will form the text of the following observations. The commentary commences thus :—]

श्री गणेशाय नमः । श्री कपिलसुन्दरे नमः । पञ्चविंशति त-त्त्वेषु जडगता ज्ञानमात्रवात् । अद्विष्टौ नमस्त्वम् कपिलाय नमस्त्वम् ।

अथात अष्टव्युमासाख्यसंख्यात्मि आख्यात्यामः ।

No. 2.—Salutation to Ganes'a ! Salutation to the great sage Kapila ! Salutation to that great sage Kapila who, at the first creation, obtained, merely by birth, a knowledge of the twenty-five principles (tatwa).

Now we shall explain the aphorisms of the Sánkhya, which constitute what is called the Compendium of Principles.

[In saying that Kapila obtained his knowledge “merely by birth,” the author means that Kapila differed from those other teachers who, after being born, received instruction before they were qualified to teach. Kapila is regarded as an incarnation of the deity.]

इह कन्दिद्वाद्वयस्त्रिविषेन दुःखेनाभिभूतः सांखाचार्यं कपि-

शाह । भगवन् किमिह परं । किं वाथातस्य । किं कृत्वा कृतकायः
स्थामिति । कपिल उवाच । कथविष्णामि ।

No. 3.—A certain brâhman, aggrieved by the three kinds of pain, had recourse to the great sage Kapila, the teacher of the Sâṅkhyâ. Having declared his family, his name and race, and his desire of instruction, he said—“ Holy Sir ! What is of all things the most important ? What is actual truth ? And what must I do in order that I may have done what is fitting to be done ? ” Kapila replied—“ I shall tell you.”

[The Aphorisms of Kapila here follow.]

No. 4.—“(1) The eight ‘produeers’ (prakriti) ; (2) the six“ teen ‘productions’ (vikára) ; (3) ‘Soul’ (purusha) ; (4) the “ ‘triad of qualities’ (traiguṇya) ; (5) ‘emanation’ or ‘develope-“ ment’ (sanchara) ; (6) ‘re-absorption’ or ‘dissolution’ (pratisan“ chara) ; (7) the ‘ministers of Soul’ (adhyátma) ; (8) the ‘pro“ vince of an organ’ (adhibhúta) ; (9) the respective ‘presiding “ deity’ (adhidaivata) ; (10) the five ‘perversities of understand“ ing’ (abhibuddhi) ; (11) the five ‘sources of action’ (karmma“ yoni) ; (12) the five ‘airs’ (váyu) ; (13) the five ‘which consist “ of action’ (karmmátmā) ; (14) ‘ignorance’ (avidyá) under five “ divisions ; (15) ‘disability’ (as'akti) of twenty-eight kinds ; (16)
“ ‘acquiescence’ or ‘indifference’ (tushṭi) of nine kinds ; (17) “ ‘perfectness’ (siddhi) of eight kinds ; (18) the ‘radical facts’ “ (mulikártha) of ten kinds ; (19) ‘benevolent nature,’ (anugra-“ ha-sarga) ; (20) ‘created existences’ (bhúta-sarga) of ten de“ scriptions ; (21) ‘parental creation’ (dhátu-sansarga) of three dis“ criptions ; (22) three-fold ‘bondage’ (bandha) ; (23) three-fold “ ‘liberation’ (moksha) ; (24) three-fold ‘proof’ (pramána) ; (25)
“ three-fold ‘pain’ (du'kha) :— in this consists all actual truth.
“ He who shall have thoroughly understood this, will have done
“ all that is to be done. He will not again be obnoxious to the “ three sorts of pain.”

Such are the Aphorisms of the Sánkhya, entitled the ‘Compendium of Principles.’

[The commentator then proceeds to dilate on each of the foregoing topics.]

चेष्टे का अष्टा प्रकृतयः । इत्यस्ते । अवलं चुम्बिरुद्धकारः पञ्च
तन्मात्राणीत्वेता अष्टा प्रकृतयः ।

No. 5.—Now which are those eight 'producers'? To this it is replied—(1) the 'undiscrete' (avyakta) ; (2) 'intellect' (buddhi) ; (3) 'self-consciousness' (ahankára) ; and (4—8) the five 'subtile rudiments' (tan-mátra) ;—these are the eight 'producers.'

[Each of these eight 'producers' is now taken up in its order.]

तचाव्यक्तं तावदुच्चते । यथा लोके अज्ञने घटपटकुटशब्दनका-
द्या न तथा व्यञ्जते इत्यव्यक्ते । ओर्धादिभिरिन्द्रियैर्न गुणाते

निधनं तथाप्रसवधार्नि निरवयवमेकमेव इ चाधारणेतदव्यक्तं ।

No. 6.—Now the 'undiscrete' is described. As, in this world, jars, webs, vases, and couches are made manifest, not so is the 'undiscrete':—that is to say—it is not apprehended by the hearing or by any other sense. Why? Because it has neither beginning, middle, nor end; nor is it made up of parts. The inaudible, intangible, invisible, indestructible, and likewise eternal, devoid of savour and odour,—without beginning or middle, anterior in order to mind, firm and chief—thus do the learned designate it. Subtile, devoid of characteristic attributes, unconscious, without beginning or end,—so too whose nature it is to produce, without parts, one only, the common [source of all]—such is the 'undiscrete.'

अव्यक्तस्थानी पर्वातशब्दा भवति । अव्यक्तं । प्रधानं । द्रष्टा ।
एवं । ध्रुवं । प्रधानकं । अचरं । क्षेत्रं । तमः । प्रसूतमिति ।

No. 7.—Synonyms of the ‘undiscrete’ are the following—viz : the ‘undistinguished,’ ‘unseparated,’ or ‘imperceptible’ (avyakta); the ‘chief’ (pradhāna); the ‘source of emanation’ (brahma); the ‘receptacle’ or ‘abode,’ (pura); the ‘permanent’ (dhrūva) ; the ‘chief,’ or ‘that in which all generated effect is comprehended’ (pradhānaka) ; the ‘indestructible’ (akshara) ; the ‘site’ or ‘field’ (kshetra); ‘darkness’ (tamas); the ‘productive source’ (pra-sūta).

[Several of these terms are not, strictly speaking, synonyms, further than as they are all applicable to the ‘undiscrete’. They are epithets employed for reasons which may appear in the sequel. A similar remark applies to the various lists of synonyms which will be met with further on.

We now come to the second of the eight ‘producers’ (No. 5) —viz ‘intellect’.]

का बुद्धिरचोचते । अध्यवसायी बुद्धिः । सो इवमध्यवसायो गवादिषु द्रव्येषु वस्त्रात्प्रतिपत्तिः । एवमेतन्नान्यथा । गौरेवायं नास्यः । स्ताणुरेकायं न युरुषः । इत्येषा बुद्धिः ।

No. 8.—What is ‘intellect’? To this it is replied—‘intellect’ is ‘ascertainment’ (adhyavasaya). This it is from which, in regard to a cow or any other thing, there is the determination ‘This is so and so, and not otherwise’—‘This is a cow, not a horse’—‘This is a post, not a man.’ Such is ‘intellect’ or ‘understanding.’

[The various aspects under which this faculty is regarded as presenting itself, are next specified.]

अस्त्रासु बुद्धेरष्टौ रूपाणि भवन्ति धर्मो ज्ञानं वैराग्यमैश्चर्यमि- ति ।

No. 9.—Of this ‘intellect’ there are eight forms—(1) ‘virtue’ (dharma) ; (2) ‘knowledge’ (jnyána) ; (3) ‘dispassion’ (vairágya) ; (4) superhuman ‘power’ (aiswarya)—[the remaining four being the opposites or negatives of these. See No. 14.]

तत्र धर्मो नामाधर्मविपर्ययः अनुत्सृतिविहितः शिष्टाचारा- विरहः शुभलक्षणः ।

No. 10.—‘Virtue’ (dharma) is the opposite of ‘vice’ (adharma) ; it is what is enjoined in the ‘scripture’ (s'ruti) and in the ‘law’ (smriti) ; not opposed to the practice of the pious—of which the symptom is felicity [—prosperity being regarded as the fruit of former virtue, and adversity as that of former vice.]

ज्ञानं नामाज्ञानविपर्ययः । तत्त्वभावभूतानां सम्बोधः ।

No. 11,—‘Knowledge’ (jnyána) is the opposite of ‘ignorance’ (ajnyána)—an acquaintance with the ‘principles’ (tatwa), the ‘forms’ of intellect (bháva-No. 9.), and the ‘elements’ (bhúta-No 31.)

वैराग्यं नामावैराग्यविपर्ययः । शब्दादिविषयेष्वप्रसक्तिः ।

No. 12.—‘Dispassion’ (vairágya) is the opposite of ‘passion’ (avairágya) :—it consists in not concerning one’s self about sounds or any other ‘objects of sense’ (vishaya).

ऐश्वर्यं नामानैश्वर्यविपर्ययः । अणिमादयो ऽष्टगुणाः । ए-तानि सात्त्विकानि चत्वारि ।

No. 13.—Superhuman ‘power’ (aiswarya) is the opposite of ‘powerlessness’ (anaiswarya) ; it consists of the eight qualities,

[the capacity of assuming a form of the utmost] ‘minuteness’ (aṇimá) &c.

These four [kinds of ‘intellect’—Nos. 10.—13.] are [regarded as] ‘partaking of the quality of goodness’ (sátwika). [See No. 50].

अधर्मोऽज्ञानवैराग्यमनैश्वर्यमिति । अधर्मो नाम धर्मविपर्ययः । श्रुतिसूतिविरहः । शिष्टाचारविरहः । अशुभलक्षणः । अज्ञानं नाम ज्ञानविपर्ययः । तत्त्वभावमूलानामनवबोधः । अवैराग्यं नाम वैराग्यविपर्ययः । शब्दादिविषयेष्वमिनिवेशः । अनैश्वर्यं नाम ऐश्वर्यविपर्ययः । अणिमादिरहितत्वं । एतानि तामसानि चत्वारि ।

No. 14.—‘Vice’ (adharma), ‘ignorance’ (ajnyána), ‘subjection to passion’ (avairágya), and ‘powerlessness’ (anaiswarya), [are next described].

‘Vice’ is the opposite of ‘virtue’—opposed to Scripture and Law—opposed to the practice of the pious—and of which the symptom is adversity. [See No. 10].

‘Ignorance’ is the opposite of ‘knowledge’—the reverse of an acquaintance with the ‘principles’, the ‘forms’ of intellect, and the ‘elements’. [See No. 11.]

‘Subjection to passion’ is the opposite of ‘dispassion’ :—it consists in perseveringly concerning one’s self about sounds and other objects of sense.

‘Powerlessness’ is the opposite of superhuman ‘power’ :—it is the being destitute of [the capacity of] ‘minuteness’ &c.

These four [kinds of ‘intellect’] are [regarded as] ‘partaking of the quality of Darkness’ (támasa). [See No. 52].

[What consequences severally appertain to the above-described modifications of 'intellect,' is next stated.]

तत्र धर्मेण निमित्तेनोद्धर्वगमनं । ज्ञानेन निमित्तेन मोक्षः ।
वैराग्येण निमित्तेन प्रह्लादित्यः । ऐश्वर्यनिमित्तेनाप्रतिहतगति-
र्भवति । एवमेषा त्वष्टुपा बुद्धिः परिखाता ।

No. 15.—Through 'virtue,' as a cause, there is 'elevation in the scale of being' (úrdhva-gamana) ; through 'knowledge,' as a cause, there is 'liberation' from existence (moksha) ; through 'dispassion,' as a cause, there is 'absorption into nature,' (prakriti-laya) ; through superhuman 'power,' as a cause, there is 'unimpeded movement' [even through solid rocks and the like], (apratihata-gati).

Thus has 'intellect,' in its eight forms [No. 9] been described.

बुद्धेन्द्रिये पर्वामशस्त्रा भवन्ति ।

मनो भूतिर्भान् ब्रह्मा खातिः प्रज्ञा अुतिर्भूतिः । प्रज्ञानस-
न्ततिः सूतिर्भीवुद्धिः परिकथते ।

No. 16.—The following words are synonyms—[See No. 7]—of 'intellect'—viz : 'mind' (manas) ; 'understanding' (mati) ; the 'great' principle (mahat) ; the 'Creator' (brahmā) ; 'familiar knowledge' (khyáti) ; 'wisdom' (prajnyá) ; 'intelligence through report' (séruiti) ; 'resolution' (dhruti) ; a 'train of thought' (prajnyána-santati) ; 'memory' (smriti) ; and 'meditation' (dhi) ; in such terms is 'intellect' spoken of.

[We now come to the third of the eight 'producers' (No. 5)—viz 'self-consciousness'—that which is implied in a man's employing the pronoun 'I'—a pronoun the employment of which declares the speaker's belief that he possesses an individuality of his own.]

अचाह को इहंकार इत्युच्चते । अभिमानो इहंकारः ।
 यो इयमभिमानः । अहं शब्दे अहं सर्वे अहं रूपे अहं रसे ।
 अहं गन्धे अहं स्वामी धनवानहमीश्वरः । अहं भोगी अहं धर्मे इभि-
 षक्तो इसौ मया हतः । अहं हनिष्ठे बलिभिः परैरित्येवमादिकः
 प्रत्ययो यः से इहंकारः ।

No. 17.—To the question—what is ‘self-consciousness’?—it is replied that ‘self-consciousness’ is a ‘conceit’ (abhimána)—the conceit or fancy that ‘I am the embracer in the case of sound’ [i. e., ‘I hear’], ‘I feel,’ ‘I see,’ ‘I taste,’ ‘I am lord,’ ‘I am rich,’ ‘I am deity,’ ‘I enjoy,’ ‘I am connected with virtue,’ ‘by me was he slain,’ ‘I shall be slain by powerful enemies:’—such and the like belief is ‘self-consciousness.’

[The term ahankára (the ‘making of an Ego or an I’), the technical import of which, as remarked by Professor Wilson, is ‘the pride or conceit of individuality,* is gendered, in Mr. Colebrooke’s version of the Sánkhya Káriká, by the term ‘Egotism.’ It must be carefully borne in mind that the word ‘egotism,’ thus employed, is not to carry with it the familiar import of bustling vanity—the feeling which prompts a vain man to be constantly talking about himself:—for, a man who is no ‘egotist,’ in that familiar sense of the term, is not the less chargeable with ahan-kára, if he fancies that his employing the pronoun ‘I’ at all is not an absurdity. The word, as described by Váchaspati, in his commentary on the 24th of the Kárikás of Íś'vara Krishṇa, might signify ‘egotism’ in the ordinary sense—verging even on ‘ego-ism,’—i.e., the belief that ‘besides me there is nought else:’—but the significance of Kapila’s system will perhaps be more clearly dis-

* Sánkhya Káriká—p. 91.

cerned, if the technical acceptation of the term, as given by Professor Wilson, be strictly adhered to.]

अहंकारस्यामी पर्यावश्वदः । अहंकारो वैकारिकस्तैजयो भूतादिः सानुमानो निरनुमानस्तेति ।

No. 18.—The various epithets given to ‘self-consciousness’ are ‘the conceit of individuality’ (ahankára) ; the ‘modifying’ (vai-kárika) ; the ‘ardent’ (taijasa) ; the ‘origin of the elements’ (bhútádi) ; ‘dependent on inference’ (sánumána) ; and ‘independent of inference’ (niranumána).

[Of the eight ‘producers’ (No. 5) we have now to consider the last five—viz., the five ‘subtile elements’—the rudiments of what are familiarly called the ‘elements.’]

अचाह कानि पञ्च तन्माचाणीत्युच्यते । अहंकारन्वितानि पञ्च तन्माचाणि । शब्दतन्माचं सर्वतन्माचं रूपतन्माचं रसतन्माचं गन्धतन्माचञ्चेति पञ्च तन्माचाणि ।

No. 19.—To the question—what are the five ‘subtile elements?’—it is replied :—the five ‘subtile elements’ are consequents of ‘self-consciousness.’ The ‘subtile element of sound’ (sábda-tanmátra) ; the ‘subtile element of tangibility’ (spars'a-tanmátra) ; the ‘subtile element of colour’ (rúpa-tanmátra) ; the ‘subtile element of savour’ (rasa-tanmátra) ; and the ‘subtile element of odour’ (gandha-tanmátra) ;—these are the five ‘subtile elements.’

[“ Tan-mátra is a compound of tad, ‘that,’ and mátra, ‘alone;’ implying, that in which its own peculiar property resides, without any change or variety.” In this respect the ‘subtile elements’ are held to differ from the gross or derivative elements, the pro-properties of which are various at different times and in respect to different mortals.]

तत्र तावच्छब्दतन्माचाणि शब्देष्वेवोपलभ्यन्ते । उदानानुदा- न्तस्सरितकम्पिनष्टुर्धं भगान्धारमध्यमपच्चमधैवतनिषादाद्यः । श-
ब्दविशेषा उपलभ्यन्ते । तस्माच्छब्दतन्माचे ३ विशेषः ।

No. 20.—The ‘subtile elements of sound’ [like the ‘atoms’ of the Nyáya, which are separately inappreciable by the senses of men,] are apprehended only in [derivative and gross] ‘sounds.’ Varieties of ‘sound’ are apprehended, such as ‘acutely accented,’ ‘gravely accented,’ ‘circumflexly accented,’ and [the notes of the gamut—viz. :] ‘C’ (shadja), ‘D’ (rishabha), ‘E’ (gándhára), ‘F’ (madhyama—i. e., the ‘middle’ note of the scale—corresponding to the ‘sub-dominant’*), ‘G’ (panchama—i.e. the ‘fifth’ note of the scale—corresponding to the ‘dominant’), ‘A’ (dhaivata), ‘B’ (nisháda), &c. But there is not hence [i. e., in accordance with the variety in sounds appreciable by mortals] any diversity in the ‘subtile element of sound’ itself.

† It is noticeable that the keynote and those two important notes, the dominant and sub-dominant, have names marking their place in the scale, whilst the other names are unscientific and fantastical. The word rishabha means 'a bull,' gandhabha means 'red lead,' dhaiavata seems to have no sense elsewhere, and nishada means 'an outcaste.' The keynote—viz., shad-ja 'born of six' is said to be so named because it is "supposed to require for its articulation the employment of the tongue, teeth, palate, nose, throat and teeth,"—but this is evidently the conjecture of a grammarian, not of a musician. The writers on music may have given it the name as indicative of the acoustic fact that the ear, though content if the keynote be sounded, demands that, if the other six are sounded in their order, the keynote shall follow (before closing) to complete the octave and to form the cadence. It is "the offspring of (all or any of these) six."

स्पृथ स्फूर्तन्माचाणि स्पर्शेष्वेवोपलभ्यन्ते । तत्र च्छुकठिनक-

No. 21.—The ‘subtile elements of tangibility’ are apprehended only in [derivative cases—see No. 20—] of ‘tangibility.’ In these, varieties of ‘tangibility’ are apprehended—such as ‘soft,’ ‘hard,’ ‘rough,’ ‘slippery,’ ‘cold,’ ‘hot,’ &c. But there is not hence any diversity in the ‘subtile element of tangibility’ itself.

रूपतन्माचाणि रूपेष्वेवोपलभ्यन्ते । तत्र शुक्लरक्तक्षणहरित-
पीतहारिद्रमाजिष्ठादयो रूपविशेषा उपलभ्यन्ते । तस्माद्बूपतन्मा- चे ऽविशेषः ।

No. 22.—The ‘subtile elements of colour’ are apprehended only in ‘colours.’ In these, varieties of ‘colour’ are apprehended—such as ‘white,’ ‘red,’ ‘black,’ ‘green,’ ‘yellow,’ ‘turmeric-colour,’ ‘madder-colour,’ &c. But there is not hence any diversity in the ‘subtile element of colour’ itself.

रसतन्माचाणि रसेष्वेवोपलभ्यन्ते । तत्र कटुतिक्तकषायक्ता-
रमधुराम्बुद्धवणादयो रसविशेषा उपलभ्यन्ते । तस्माद्बृसतन्माचे
ऽविशेषः ।

No. 23.—The ‘subtile elements of savour’ are apprehended only in ‘savour.’ In this, varieties of ‘savour’ are apprehended—such as ‘pungent,’ ‘bitter,’ ‘astringent,’ ‘alkaline,’ ‘sweet,’ ‘acid,’ ‘salt,’ &c. But there is not hence any diversity in the ‘subtile element of savour’ itself.

गन्धतन्माचाणि गन्धे एवोपलभ्यन्ते । तच सुरभिरसूरभिस्य
गन्धविशेषौ उपलभ्यते । तस्माङ्गन्धतन्माचे ऽविशेषः । एव-मेतत्पञ्चतन्माचाणि सूचितानि ।

No. 24.—The ‘subtile elements of odour’ are apprehended only in ‘odour.’ In this, two varieties of ‘odour’—viz., ‘fragrance’ and ‘stench,’ are apprehended. But there is not hence any diversity in the ‘subtile element of odour’ itself.

Thus have the five ‘subtile elements’ been made known.

व्यक्तुद्गुहंकारतन्माचसंज्ञिता अष्टौ प्रकृतयो व्याख्याताः । अ-थ कस्मात्प्रकृतयः । प्रकुर्वन्तीति प्रकृतयः ।

No. 25.—Now the synonyms of these are ‘elemental rudiments’ (tan-mátra) ; ‘unvaried’ (avis’esha) ; the ‘pervading elements’ or ‘whence the gross elements proceed’ (mahá-bhúta) ; ‘producers’ (prakriti) ; ‘not adapted for [mortal] fruition’ (a-bhogya) ; ‘atoms’ (anu) ; ‘not soothing’ (as’ánta) ; ‘not terrific’ (aghora) ; ‘not stupifying’ (amúdha). [These last three names refer to the triad of Qualities—see No. 49]. Thus, have the eight producers—viz., the ‘undiscrete,’ ‘intellect,’ ‘self-consciousness,’ and the five ‘subtile elements,’ been explained.

Now why are these (No. 5) called ‘producers’? It is because they produce [the sixteen ‘productions’—see No. 4—which are next to be described.]

No. 29.—The five ‘organs of action’ (karmendriya), viz., the ‘voice’ or the ‘larynx &c.’ (vák), the ‘hands,’ the ‘feet,’ the ‘organ of excretion,’ and the ‘organ of generation,’ perform severally their own function. The ‘voice’ pronounces words. The ‘hands’ perform actions. The ‘feet’ perform locomotion; the ‘organ of excretion,’ evacuation; and the ‘organ of generation,’ enjoyment. ‘Mind’ (manas), an organ both of observation and action, performs its appropriate functions of ‘resolving’ (sankalpa) and ‘doubting’ (vikalpa).

Thus have the eleven organs been described.

No. 32.—‘Earth,’ acting in the character of supporter, co-operates with the [other] four [elements, in the production of effects.] ‘Water’ acting in its character of the ‘humid,’ co-operates with the other four. ‘Light,’ acting in the way of ‘maturation,’ co-operates with the other four. ‘Air,’ acting in the way of ‘siccation,’ co-operates with the other four. ‘Ether,’ acting in the way of giving space, co-operates with the other four.

‘Earth’ is possessed of five qualities—having ‘sound,’ ‘tangibility,’ ‘colour,’ ‘avour,’ and ‘odour.’ ‘Water,’ possesses ‘sound,’ ‘tangibility,’ ‘colour,’ and ‘avour.’ ‘Light’ possesses ‘sound,’ ‘tangibility,’ and ‘colour.’ ‘Air’ possesses ‘sound’ and ‘tangibility.’ ‘Ether’ has the single quality of ‘sound.’

Thus have the ‘gross’ ‘elements’ been set forth.

Thus have the sixteen ‘productions’ or ‘modifications’ been described.

[The eight 'producers,' and the sixteen 'productions,' or results of the modification of the 'producers,' having been thus described, the third of Kapila's aphorisms, in which he announces 'soul,' is next adverted to.]

No. 36.—Now why is it ['soul'] said to be 'without beginning' [No. 34]? Because it has neither beginning, middle, nor end. Why 'subtile'? From its being without parts, and its transcending the senses. Why 'omnipresent'? Because it comes into relation with all, and its sphere is boundless as the sky. Why 'intelligent'? From its discerning pleasure, pain, and delusion. Why 'without qualities'? Because neither the quality of 'goodness' [No. 49], of 'passion,' nor of 'darkness,' is in it. Why 'eternal'? From its not being made or produced. Why 'spectator'? Because it apprehends the modifications which productive nature undergoes. Why 'enjoyer'? Because it discerns pleasure and pain through its possession of intelligence. Why 'not an agent'? From its being indifferent (udāśina) and devoid of the 'qualities' [see No. 42.] Why the 'knower of body'? Because through bodies it apprehends the 'qualities.' Why 'pure'? Because in this 'soul' there are neither good actions nor bad. Why 'not wont to produce'? Because it is seedless :—that is to say, it does not give rise to any thing.

Thus has the 'soul' of the Sánkhya been described?

No. 45.—Here the question occurs—is ‘soul’ one, or many? To this it is replied:—the multiplicity of ‘soul’ is proved by the diversity of the conditions of pleasure, pain, delusion, mixture of race, purity of race, soundness of organs, birth, and death, and by the difference of the world (heaven, earth, and hell,) and of office, and of caste. If there were only one ‘soul,’ then, when one is happy, all would be happy; when one is grieved, all would be grieved; when one is deluded, all would be deluded; when one is of mixed race, all would be of mixed race; when one is of pure race, all would be of pure race; when one possesses soundness of organs, all would possess soundness of organs; when one is born, all would be born; when one dies, all would die. Hence ‘soul’ is not one; and hence multifarious ‘souls’ are proved to exist—for these possess a multiplicity of distinctive characters in the diversified allotment of form, birth, habitation, fortune, society, and body.

It alone is pure, it is the vast one, it is the waters, it is the lord of creatures, it alone is the true nectar of immortality, it is liberation, it is the ultimate goal, it is the indestructible, it is the glory of the sun, it is that beyond which there is nothing else, than which there is nothing either more recent or more ancient.

No. 48.—Firm as a tree it remains in the heavens. With that Soul all this is filled everywhere. On all sides are the hands, feet, eyes, heads, and faces of that [Soul-tree]—and, with ears in all directions, it stands embracing all—assuming the aspect of all the organs and qualities, though devoid of all the qualities—the lord and ruler of all—the great refuge of all—that which altogether is all the principles, is every soul, is the source of all—into which all is resolved—the sages regard it as Brahma. For only one soul is located in various bodies; as the Moon, though but one, appears many in [many vessels of] water. In all existences, immovable or locomotive, it dwells—one only—by which all this [universe] was spread out. This soul, of all worlds, is but one:—by whom is it made more? Some speak of soul as several—seeing that Knowledge and other mental states are observable [simultaneously—some being happy while others are sad]; but in the Brâhman, the worm, and the insect; in the outcaste, the dog, and the elephant; in goats, cows, gadflies, and gnats, the wise behold the same [single Soul]. Just as a thread may pass through golden beads, and again in like manner through pearls, gems, coral, earthen beads, or silver,—so this Soul is to be regarded as remaining everywhere one—in cows, men, elephants, deer, &c.

No. 54.—The next question is—what is (meant by) ‘developement’ and ‘resolution’ (sanchara and pratisanchara—the 5th and 6th in Kapila’s enumeration of topics—No. 6)? To this it is replied—‘development’ is production :—‘ reabsorption’ (pratisanchara) is dissolution. [The order of] ‘production’ is as follows :—from the ‘undiscrete’ beforementioned [No. 7], superintended by Soul, which is another [than Nature, and for whose use is the assemblage of sensible objects,] and omnipresent, ‘intellect’ is produced. ‘Intellect’ is of eight kinds—[No. 9]. From the principle of ‘intellect’ ‘self-consciousness’ [No. 17] is produced. ‘Self-consciousness’ is of three kinds [No. 18]—the ‘modifying,’ the ‘active,’ ‘ardent,’ or ‘urgent,’ and the ‘origin of the elements.’ From the ‘modifying self-consciousness’ the gods and the senses are produced; from [self-consciousness as] ‘the origin of the elements’ the ‘subtile elements’ (No. 19) are produced. From the ‘active’ both proceed, [for, without the ‘active,’ both the others are held to be inert]. From the ‘subtile elements’ [are produced] the [gross] ‘elements’:—such is [the order of] ‘development.’

No. 55.—‘Reabsorption’ [No. 6] is as follows :—the ‘elements’ are resolved into the ‘subtile elements;’ the ‘subtile elements’ and the ‘senses’ into ‘self-consciousness;’ ‘self-consciousness’ into ‘intellect;’ ‘intellect’ into the ‘undiscrete.’ The ‘undiscrete’ is nowhere dissolved. Why? Because it was not produced out of anything (into which it might be resolvable). Regard Nature and Soul as being both eternal. Thus has ‘reabsorption’ been explained.

The 'hands' are 'ministers of soul;' whatever is 'to be grasped' constitutes their 'province;' Indra is their 'presiding deity.' The feet are 'ministers of soul;' whatever is 'to be gone over' constitutes their 'province;' Vishṇu is their 'presiding deity.' The 'organ of excretion' is a 'minister of soul;' whatever is 'to be excreted' constitutes its 'province;' Mitra is its 'presiding deity.' The 'organ of generation' is a 'minister of soul;' what is 'to be enjoyed' constitutes its 'province;' Prajápati is its 'presiding deity.'

Such, in the case of each of the thirteen kinds of instruments [of the soul], is the respective 'minister,' 'province,' and 'presiding deity'.

No. 57.—Whosoever is correctly acquainted with the 'principles' [viz. the 8 'producers', 16 'productions,' and 'soul?'], the nature of the 'qualities,' and the 'presiding deities' [No. 56], being liberated from his sins and released from the whole of his defects, enjoys [the various pleasing effects of] the 'qualities,' (while he remains in the world) and is liberated from the 'qualities' (when he attains to final emancipation).

So much for the discussion of the [25] ‘principles’ (tattwa).

, No. 58.—Now what are those five ‘intelligent functions’ (No. 6)? To this it is replied:—‘ascertainment’ (adhyavasáya), ‘conceit’ (abhimána), ‘willing’ (ichchhá), ‘adaptability’ (karttavyatá), and ‘action’ (kriyá). The function of intellect when it decides ‘This is to be done by me,’ is ‘ascertainment’ (adhyavasáya). That function of the intellect, self-consciousness,—the notion that ‘I act’—which fixes on the conceptions of ‘self’ and ‘not-self’—is ‘conceit’. The intelligent function of ‘mind’ is ‘willing’—desiring and purposing. The intelligent function of the organs of sense (No. 27) is the ‘adaptability’ of each sense, such as the hearing, or the like, to its object, such as sound, or the like. The intelligent function of those (organs of action—No. 29)—which are recognised by ‘utterance,’ and the like, is called ‘action’.

Thus have the five ‘intelligent functions’ been explained.

No. 59.—Now, what are those five ‘sources of action’ (No. 6) ? To this it is replied :—‘firmness,’ or ‘decision of character’ (dhriti), ‘faith’ (s'raddhā), ‘piety’ (sukhā), ‘indifference about knowledge’ (avividishā), and ‘desire of knowledge’ (vividishā) :—these are the five ‘sources of action.’

Having resolved on any outward act, he who keeps his purpose, being intent on it, and carrying it into effect,—this [conduct of such a man] furnishes the definition of ‘firmness.’

The characters by which ‘faith’ may be recognised are stated to be the perusal of the Scriptures, the condition of the religious student, sacrificing or causing sacrifices, penance, giving and receiving proper donations, and making oblations.

But he who may addict himself to study, to religious actions, and austerities, being always intent on penances with a view to the obtaining of future enjoyments,—this [conduct of such a one] is called ‘piety.’

‘Indifference about knowledge’ implies that the heart is engrossed with the sweets of sensual objects.

‘Desire of knowledge’ is the source of the wisdom of the wise.

The unity (of Nature), the severality (of Nature and Soul), the eternity [of Soul] and its unconsciousness, the subtilty [of Nature], the existence of effect [in its cause—even antecedently to manifestation—as the statue exists in the block of marble—] and the duration (of body even after the attainment of knowledge—see No. 69)—this is to be considered (as constituting the assemblage of matters which form the object of) ‘the desire of (true) knowledge’.

No. 60.—It is now asked—what are the five ‘airs’ (No. 6)? To this it is replied :—the five airs, in the bodies of those who have bodies, are those named prána, apána, samána, udána, and vyána. The ‘air’ called prána is that which is superintended by the mouth and nose. It is so named because it comprises ‘inspiration’ (pranayana) and ‘expiration’ (prakramaya). [This refers to the process of respiration]. The ‘air’ called apána is that which is superintended by the navel. It is so called from its ‘taking away’ (apanayana), and ‘going downwards’. [This refers to flatulence]. The ‘air’ called samána is superintended by the heart. It is so called from its ‘leading and going equably’ [neither up nor down—as far as regards the food, to aid in the digestion of which is its province]. The ‘air’ called udána is that which is superintended by the throat. It is so named from its ascending and ‘going upwards’ (utkramana). [This refers to the arterial pulsation &c. of the upper members of the body—the throat and head]. The ‘air’ called vyána is the ‘pervader’ (vyápaka) of the whole body. [This refers to pulsation in general and all the other involuntary actions of the system.]

Thus have the five ‘airs’ been described.

No. 61.—It is now asked—what are those five ‘whose nature is action’ (No. 6)? To this it is replied :—the ‘modifying’ (vaikárika), the ‘ardent’ (taijasa), the ‘origin of the elements’ (bhútádi), that which is ‘associated with inference’ (sánumána), and that which is ‘not associated with inference’ (niranumána). Among these the ‘modifying’ [form of ‘self-consciousness’—see No. 18—] is the agent in good actions :—the ‘ardent’ is the agent in actions not good :—the ‘origin of the elements’ is the producer of things good but obscure :—[self-consciousness] ‘associated with inference’ is the worker of what is good but foolish :—and that which is ‘not associated with inference' is the worker of what is not good and (also) foolish.

Thus have the five been explained, 'whose nature is action.'

No. 62.—Here it is asked—what is that 'ignorance'—under five divisions [No. 6] ? To this it is replied :—'obscurity' (tamas), 'illusion' (moha), 'extreme illusion' (mahámoha), 'gloom' (támisra), and 'utter darkness' (andha-támisra). Among these, 'obscurity' and 'illusion' are each eightfold. 'Extreme illusion' is tenfold. 'Gloom' and 'utter darkness' are eighteenfold.

'Obscurity' is the conceit that [he will be liberated from transmigration because] soul [merges] into [some one or other of] the eight ‘producers,’ which are not Soul—viz., those called the ‘undiscrete,’ ‘intellect,’ ‘self-consciousness,’ and the five ‘subtile elements,—[the errors in regard to these eight severally making up the eight varieties of ‘obscurity’]. ‘Illusion’ is the conceit (of liberation) which arises from the possession of the eight kinds of superhuman power, such as ‘minuteness’ and the rest (No. 13). ‘Extreme illusion’ is when one supposes ‘I am liberated’ through (any one of) the ten modes (supplied by) the objects of sense, viz., sounds, &c., belonging to the seen and to the unseen (or scripture-revealed) world—(i. e. the five as perceived by men and the five as perceived by the gods). ‘Gloom’ is that unchecked hate (or fierce impatience) in regard to the (possession of the) eight kinds of superhuman power, ‘minuteness,’ &c., and the ten kinds of objects of sense, which (by preventing liberation) results in the three kinds of pain (incident to corporeal existence.) ‘Utter darkness’ is the name given to that grief which arises at the time of death, when one is in possession of (any one of) the eight kinds of superhuman power, or of the ten kinds of objects of sense.

Thus has fivefold ‘ignorance’ (the obstruction to the soul’s object of final liberation) in its sixty-two varieties, been declared.

No. 63.—It is now asked—what is twenty-eightfold ‘disability’ (No. 6)? To this it is replied :—the depravity of the eleven organs, and the seventeen injuries of the intellect—these constitute twenty-eightfold ‘disability.’ Now the defects of the organs are stated :—in the organ of hearing, deafness ; in the organ of taste, insensibility ; in the organ of touch, leprosy ; in the organ of sight, blindness ; in the organ of smell, loss of smell ; in the organ of utterance, dumbness ; in the hands, crippledness ; in the feet, lameness ; in the organ of excretion, constipation ; in the organ of generation, impotence ; in the mind, insanity :—such are the defects of the eleven organs. The seventeen ‘injuries of the intellect’ are the reverse of (the nine kinds of) ‘acquiescence’ and of (the eight kinds of) ‘perfectness.’ What is meant by the ‘reverse of acquiescence’ is next stated.

No. 64.—Among these [that] are the ‘reverse of acquiescence’ —No. 66—] that called anantā is the belief that there is no such thing as Nature. In like manner, (non-acquiescence) in the notion that Soul consists of Intellect, is that called támasa-lína. So, again—the non-recognition of ‘self-consciousness’ is that called avedyá. (The notion that) there are no ‘subtile elements,’ the causes of the gross elements, is that called avrishṭi. The concerning one's self about the acquisition of the objects of sense is that (form of non-acquiescence) called asutára; and (the concerning one's self) about their preservation is that called asu-pára. The concerning one's self about property, without regarding the evils of waste, is that called asunetra. The addiction to enjoyment is that called asumaríchiká. The engaging in enjoyment, on the part of one who does not look to the evils arising from injury (to created beings), is that called anuttamám̄bhasiká.

Thus have the ninefold opposites of acquiescence been explained.

[The technical names here are the opposites of those adverted to in section No. 66.]

No. 65.—Now (as regards) the ‘opposites’ of perfectness. These are called also the eight ‘imperfections’ (asiddhi). When the diversity (of the various principles from which the creation proceeds) appears as the unity of the mere (phenomenal) creation—this (imperfect view of the truth) is called atára. After hearing the words merely (of a competent instructor), the adoption of the contrary is that called asutára :—as when, having heard that ‘he who acknowledges the various principles is liberated,’ one determines that it is the reverse—viz., that ‘he who acknowledges the various principles is not liberated.’ When a person, even though intent on studying and hearing, through obtuseness or from his intellect’s being impaired by unsound doctrine, does not attain to a perfect knowledge of the twenty-five principles, then his ignorance is called atáratára. To another, who, though oppressed by the pain inseparable from body and mind, yet, from feeling no anxiety about transmigration, entertains no curiosity, knowledge is no ‘delight’ (pramoda). Analogously are the next two to be regarded—viz., (the forms of ‘imperfection’ termed—as the opposites of the corresponding two forms of ‘perfectness’ in No. 67—) aprámudita and apramodamána. Ignorance that arises from the not arriving at certain knowledge even on being instructed by a friend, is that called arasya. When, from his preceptor’s disregarding him, or not instructing him correctly, an unfortunate man does not attain to knowledge, his ignorance is called asatpramudita.

Thus have those ‘opposites of perfectness,’ the eight imperfections, been explained. [The technical names are the opposites of those adverted to in section No. 67.]

Thus have the twenty-eight kinds of ‘disability’ [No. 63] been explained.

No. 66.—Now it is asked—what is ninefold ‘acquiescence’ [No. 6]? To this it is replied :—having supposed that Nature is Soul, a man contentedly betakes himself to indifference :—the technical [or slang] name of his indifference is ambhas, [the ordinary sense of which word is 'water']. Another, having satisfied himself that 'intellect' is Soul, is contented. The technical name of his 'acquiescence' is salila 'water.' Another, having come to the conclusion that 'self-consciousness' is Soul, is contented. The technical name of his 'acquiescence' is ogha 'quantity.' Another, having decided that the 'subtile elements,' those called the 'unfitted for [mortal] fruition' [No. 25] are Soul, is contented. The technical name of his 'acquiescence' is vrishati 'rain.' Such are the four 'internal' or 'spiritual' (ádhyátmika) kinds of 'acquiescence.' Where [together or separately] those four kinds of acquiescence exist, liberation does not take place—from the inconsistency [of such sentiments] with a knowledge of the principles.

The five 'external' (váhya) kinds of 'acquiescence' consist in abstaining from [the enjoyment of the five] objects of sense, [such abstinence proceeding] from observation of the evils of acquiring, preserving, waste, attachment [to sensual pleasures], and injuriousness. A man is acquiescent (and abstinent) from observation of the evils attendant on the acquiring of property; but his liberation—even though he be an ascetic—does not take place, because of the (quite possibly concurrent, and here assumed,) absence of a knowledge of the principles. This fifth kind of 'acquiescence' is (technically) named sutára. Another is acquiescent from observation of the evils attendant on the preserving of property; but his liberation—even though he be an ascetic—in the absence of a knowledge of the principles, does not take place. This sixth kind of 'acquiescence' is (technically) named supárá. Another is acquiescent from observation of the evils of the waste of property; but his liberation—even though he be an ascetic—in the absence of a knowledge of the principles, does not take place. This seventh kind of 'acquiescence' is (technically) named sunetra ('a beautiful eye'). Another is acquiescent from observation of the evils attendant on attachment (to sensual pleasures)—but his liberation—even though he be an ascetic—in the absence of a knowledge of the principles, does not take place. This eighth kind of 'acquiescence' is (technically) named sumaríchiká. Another is acquiescent, and abstains from worldly acts, from observation of the evils in the shape of injury, &c., to created beings on account of property—but his liberation—even though he be an ascetic—in the absence of a knowledge of the principles, does not take place. This ninth kind of 'acquiescence' is (technically) named anuttamá ('best'), or sátwika ('amiable').

Thus have these nine kinds of acquiescence been explained.

No. 67.—Now it is asked—what are the eight kinds of ‘perfectness’ (No. 6)? To this it is replied:—the knowledge which arises from reasoning, in regard to the principles (No. 57), the conditions of intellect (No. 9), and the elemental creation (No. 72)—this, the first kind of ‘perfectness,’ is (technically) named tára. The knowledge, in regard to the principles, the conditions of intellect, and the elemental creation, which arises from hearing alone—this second kind of ‘perfectness’ is (technically) named sutára. The knowledge, in regard to the principles, the conditions of intellect, and elemental creation, which arises from study,—this third kind of ‘perfectness’ is (technically) named tárayanti. The knowledge, in regard to the principles, the conditions of intellect, and the elemental creation, which arises on effecting the removal of internal pain,—this fourth kind of ‘perfectness’ is (technically) named pramoda (‘delight’). The knowledge, in regard to the principles, the conditions of intellect, and the elemental creation, which arises on effecting the removal of external pain—this fifth kind of ‘perfectness’ is (technically) named pramodita (‘delighted’). The knowledge, in regard to the principles, the conditions of intellect, and the elemental creation, which arises on effecting the removal of pain occasioned by something superhuman—this sixth kind of ‘perfectness’ is (technically) named pramodamána. The knowledge, in regard to the principles, the conditions of intellect, and the elemental creation, which arises from continuance of association with amiable persons,—this seventh kind of ‘perfectness’ is (technically) named ramyaká. The knowledge, in regard to the principles, the conditions of intellect, and the elemental creation, when a teacher is propitiated by giving him veneration,—this eighth kind of ‘perfectness’ is (technically) named satpramudita.

Thus have these eight kinds of ‘perfectness’ been explained.

No. 69.—‘Since the assemblage of sensible objects is for another’s use,’ the existence of Soul is established. The existence of Nature is established by the pair in order—(of antecedent and consequent)—viz., that ‘since specific objects are finite,’ therefore ‘there is a general cause which is undiscrete’. Since ‘what is causable is inconstant (and multitudinous), &c.,’ the singleness (of Nature which is not caused by aught) is established. Since ‘these (meaning the Qualities) consist in pleasure, pain, and dulness, &c.,’ (see the XIIth of the Memorial Verses of the Sánkhyā—) the objectiveness (of Nature) is established. Since ‘by manifold means (Nature, without benefit to herself, accomplishes the wish of Soul,)’ the subserviency (of Nature) is established. Since ‘it (the ‘undiscrete,’ as well as its modifications) has the three qualities, is indiscriminative, objective, &c.,’ the distinctness (of Soul, which is, in all these respects, the reverse,) is established. ‘From the contrast’ (shown to exist between active Nature and Soul) the inertness (of Soul) is established. ‘For the Soul’s contemplation of nature, and for its abstraction, &c.’—thus is the union (of the two) established. Since ‘separation (of the Soul) from the body takes place, when the object is accomplished,’ the separation of the two is established. Since ‘of birth, death, and the instruments of life, (the allotment is severally diverse),’ the multiplicity of Soul is established. Since it is ‘like the whirling of the potter’s wheel, (after the impulse that set it in motion has been discontinued),’ the peculiar habit (of body, which continues, till death, to invest the soul even of him who has attained to perfect knowledge,) is established.

Thus have the ten ‘radical facts’ been explained.

No. 71.—Now it is asked—what is ‘benevolent creation’ (No. 6)? To this it is replied :—‘benevolent creation’ consists in the production of external objects from the five ‘subtile elements.’ (As it is said) ‘Brahmá, perceiving these (senses, &c.) produced from thought (—see No. 19) to be destitute of a sphere of action, created, from these ‘subtile elements,’ this ‘benevolent creation.’

No. 72.—Now it is asked—what is the fourteenfold, ‘elemental creation’ (No. 6)? To this it is replied :—the divine kind is of eight sorts—that of hobgoblins, of titans, of attendants on the god of riches, of celestial quiristers, of demigods, of divine sages, of the planetary regents, and of the supreme deities. Such are the eight families of divinities. The grovelling kind is five-fold—that of domestic animals, winged animals, wild animals, reptiles, and, lastly, of fixed things. Mankind is single in its class—beginning with the Bráhman, and ending with the Chándála. Domestic animals, beginning with the cow, end with the mouse. Wild animals, beginning with the lion, end with the jackal. Winged animals, beginning with the bird of Vishnu (or the adjutant), end with the gnat. Reptiles, beginning with the World-snake, end with the worm. Fixed things, beginning with the tree of Paradise, end with grass. Thus is the grovelling kind five-fold. Compendiously, this (elemental) creation is threefold—(viz.,—divine, human, and grovelling—and, thus viewed, it supplies the 21st topic in Kapila’s enumeration—see No. 6.) All this constitutes what is called the mundane orb.

No. 73. —Now it is asked—what is threefold ‘bondage’ (No. 16)? To this it is replied :—the bondage of the ‘producers,’ that of the ‘modifications,’ and that of ‘ritual observance.’ And first of the ‘bondage of the producers :’—this is the name given to the ‘absorption into nature’ (No. 15.) of him who imagines that (any of) the eight ‘producers’ constitute Soul. The ‘bondage of the modifications’ is the name given to that (which opposes the liberation) of those wordly devotees who are in the power of the ‘modifications’ of nature (No. 26), such as the senses—who are devoted to objects of sense, such as sounds, &c.,—who have not their organs in subjection—who are ignorant, and deluded by passion. The ‘bondage of ritual’ is the name given to that (which opposes the liberation) of those who, whether householders, students, mendicants, or anchorets, with minds vitiated by passion and delusion, bestow (on Bráhmans, upon solemn or sacrificial occasions,) gifts prompted by conceit.

Thus has threefold ‘bondage’ been explained. And it is said—“ Bondage is spoken of by the title of ‘bondage through nature’—‘bondage through nature’s modifications’—and, thirdly, as that ‘through gifts.’ ”

No. 74.—Here it is asked—what is threefold ‘liberation’ (No. 6)?—It is (1) from the increase of knowledge, (2) from the subduing of the senses and passions, and (3) from the destruction of the whole. From the increase of knowledge and the subduing of the senses and passions, there results the destruction both of merit and demerit, and, from the destruction of merit and demerit, (liberation in the shape of) ‘singleness’ (kaivalya). And it is said—“The first liberation is (gained) by knowledge; the second, from the destruction of passion; and the third, from the destruction of all:—such are the characters of liberation.”

No. 76.—‘Perception’ (drishṭa) is now described. Whenever the five objects of the senses are present to the senses, there is ‘perception.’

No. 77.—The proof called ‘inference’ is knowledge arising on the recognition of a 'sign' (linga). For example—by the rising of clouds (regarded as a sign of approaching rain) rain is proved (to be approaching) :—by cranes and the like (regarded as a sign attendant on the sheets of water which they frequent) water (is proved to be in the neighbourhood of the place where the cranes are seen). By smoke (regarded as a sign of fire) fire (is proved to exist where the smoke originates) :—this is the third kind of inference.

No. 78.—A fact which is not established by 'perception' or by 'inference,' is established (when it is established) by 'right affirmation'. Such matters (not proveable either by perception or by inference) are (the existence of) Indra the king of the gods, the northern Kurus, the golden mountain Meru, the nymphs in Paradise. These—Indra, &c.,—not proveable either by perception or by inference, the sages, such as Vasishtha declare—saying “Indra &c. do exist.” There is also the Scripture (—which is an authority sufficient to establish such points).

“He who is assiduous in his own duties, devoid of passion and malice, intelligent, and virtuous—such a one is to be held ‘worthy’ (to be received as an authority in regard to matters not demonstrable by perception or by inference).”

Thus has ‘threefold proof’ been declared.

No. 79.—Now it is asked—what is established by this ‘three-fold proof’? To this it is replied :—As, in common life, things are estimated by means of a measure—grain and the like by means of such (measures of capacity) as a prastha, and sandal &c. by means of weights—so by means of this (apparatus of ‘perception,’ ‘inference,’ and ‘right affirmation’), the ‘principles,’ the ‘modifications of intellect,’ and the ‘elemental creation,’ [—see No. 67—] are accurately determined [pramīyante—whence their name of pramāṇa ‘proof.’]

No. 80.—“Oppressed by ‘threefold pain,’ the Bráhman had recourse to the great sage Kapila”—[see No. 5]—so the question arises—what is ‘threefold pain’? To this it is replied—‘natural and inseparable’ (ádhyátmika) ; ‘natural and extrinsic’ (ádhíbhautika) ; and ‘non-natural or superhuman’ (ádhidaivika).

No. 81.—Pain ‘natural and inseparable’ [No. 80] is of two kinds, corporeal and mental. ‘Corporeal’ means residing in the body; ‘mental’ means residing in the mind. Pain, arising from disorder of the wind, bile, or phlegm, and taking the form of fever, flux, cholera, swooning, &c., is called ‘corporeal’. Desire, anger, covetousness, folly, madness, envy, &c.,—privation of what is liked and approximation of what is disliked—this is called ‘mental’ [pain or evil.]

[The pain called ádhyátmika is that which arises from the things called adhyátma—see No. 56].

No. 85.—This is saving knowledge (derived) from the compendium (of principles laid down by KAPILA.) Having known this, there will be no further transmigration. Such is the doctrine of the magnanimous great sage Kapila.

It is to be observed that there are in this treatise (as much as, three hundred couplets of the Anushāshna metre.

Thus concludes the comment on the aphorisms called 'The Compendium of Principles.'

86.—Of the name Sánkhyā, which the philosophical system of KAPILA bears, two explanations are given. According to the one explanation, the system is so named, from the word sankhyā 'number,'—"because it observes precision of reckoning in the enumeration of its principles." As the word sankhyā also signifies "deliberation or judgment," the name was more probably intended to designate the result of the "deliberate judgment" of KAPILA on the great problem of the universe—with a special regard to emancipation from the evil that prevails in the world.

87.—The twenty-five 'principles' (tattva) of the system, it will be observed, are comprised in the first three aphorisms (No. 1)—viz., the 'eight producers,' the 'sixteen productions,' and 'Soul.' These twenty-five principles, according to the Sánkhyā, constitute "all that is;" and KAPILA, we have seen, promises the enquirer that his final liberation from all distress will be the result of understanding "the real nature of all that is." A noticeable distinction between Kapila's way of speaking of things, and that of the Naiyáyikas, presents itself in their respective choice of a fundamental verb. The language of the Nyáya is moulded on the verb "to be," and that of the Sánkhya on the verb "to make." The Nyáya asks "what is?"—the Sánkhya asks "what makes it so?" The one presents us with a "compte rendu" of the Universe as it stands :—the other presents ~~as with~~^w a cosmogony. As the one subdivides its subject-matter into the two exhaustive categories of Existence and Non-existence, the other exhibits everything (except 'Soul'—the spectator of the phantasmagoria) under the two aspects of 'producer' and 'production.'

The 'productions' are held to be not other than the 'producers' modified; and the producers—all except the first of them—are but modifications of the first—the múla-prakriti. By what process of thought the notion of such a first principle is arrived at, the following extract from Morell's History of Philosophy (Vol. I. p. 208), may serve to illustrate. Mr. Morell is there speaking of one of the latest German systems, that of Herbart.

88.—"The process by which the necessity of philosophy comes "to be felt is the following :—When we look round us upon the "world in which we live, our knowledge commences by a per- "ception of the various objects that present themselves on every "hand to our view. What we immediately perceive, however, is "not actual essence, but phenomena; and after a short time, we "discover that many of those phenomena are unreal; that they "do not portray to us the actual truth of things as they are; "and that if we followed them implicitly, we should soon be "landed in the midst of error and contradiction. For example,

" what we are immediately conscious of in coming into contact " with the external world, are such appearances as green, blue,
 " bitter, sour, extension, resistance, &c. These phenomena,
 " upon reflection, we discover not to be so many real indepen" dent existences, but properties inhering in certain substances,
 " which we term things. Again, when we examine further into " these substances, we discover that they are not real ultimate
 " essences, but that they consist of certain elements, by the " combination of which they are produced. What we term the " reality, therefore, is not the thing as a whole, but the elements " of which it is composed. Thus the further we analyse, the " further does the idea of reality recede backwards; but still it " must always be somewhere, otherwise we should be perceiving a " nonentity. The last result of the analysis is the conception
 " of an absolutely simple element, which lies at the basis of all
 " phenomena in the material world, and which we view as the " essence that assumes the different properties which come be" fore us in sensation."

89.—This "essence that assumes the different properties which come before us in sensation,"—this, which the European analyst arrives at as "the last result of the analysis"—is what the Sánkhya expositor, proceeding synthetically, lays down as his first position. This primordial essence—among the synonymes for which, given in our text-book (No. 7), are the 'undiscrete,' the 'indestructible,' that 'in which all generated effect is comprehended,' &c., is the 'Absolute' of German speculation. The developement of this principle, according to one of Schelling's views (noticed by Mr. Morell at p. 147 vol. 2d) is "not the free and designed operation of intelligence, but rather a blind impulse working, first unconsciously in nature, and only coming to self-consciousness in mind." So, according to KAPILA, "from Nature issues Mind, and thence Self-consciousness" [see No. 54]:

—but here a striking difference between the European and the Oriental theory presents itself—for the Self-consciousness, which so many European philosophers assume as the only certain starting-point, and as the very characteristic of Soul, is declared by KAPILA to be no property of Soul, and to be regarded as such only through a delusion. In the 64th of the ‘memorial verses’ of IS’WARA KRISHNA, as translated by Mr. Colebrooke, KAPILA says :—

90.—“ So, through study of principles, the conclusive, incon“ trovertible, one only knowledge is attained, that neither I AM,
“ nor is aught mine, nor do I exist.”

91.—This statement M. Cousin not unnaturally regards as amounting to “le nihilisme absolu, dernier fruit du scepticisme”—but Professor Wilson, in accordance with the commentaries, declares that “ It is merely intended as a negation of the soul’s “ having any active participation, any individual interest or pro“ perty, in human pains, possessions, or feelings.” The Soul, according to the Sánkhya, might be described in the terms in which Fichte speaks of the Mind, “as it were, an intelligent eye, “ placed in the central point of our inward consciousness, sur“ veying all that takes place there” —(Morell—Vol. 2. p. 95). In the words of KAPILA (Verse 19th), “ Soul is witness, solitary, “ bystander, spectator, and passive.” Soul being thus inert, all that is done arises from the energy of the ‘radical principle’—of which one might correctly speak in the terms employed by Schelling in speaking of the ‘Absolute,’ where he says—“ The “ primary form of the Absolute is will, or self-action. It is an “ absolute power of becoming in reality what it is in the germ.” (Morell—Vol. 2. p. 150).

92.—The ‘Absolute,’ the germ, in the hands of KAPILA, having reached the form of ‘Self-consciousness’—ahankára—the 'making of an I',—the 'positing of an Ego'—the course of subsequent developement runs parallel, for some distance, with that followed by Fichte, who takes the 'Ego' as his starting point. According to a writer in Brande's Dictionary—"To use the "language of Fichte—the ego is absolute, and posits itself: it is "a pure activity. As its activity, however, has certain indefinable limits, when it experiences this limitation of its activity, "it also posits a non-ego, and so originates the objective world. "The ego, therefore, cannot posit itself without at the same "time projecting a non-ego; which, consequently, is in so far "the mere creation of the ego." In like manner the ahankára of KÁPILA creates [No. 54] out of itself the five 'subtile elements,' the bases of the gross elements,—so that the world of sense, formed out of these, is, in this as in Fichte's system, "the mere creation of the ego." A marked difference between the two systems, as observed before, consists in this—that KÁPILA makes the creative 'Ego' to be something else than 'Soul,' which latter, he holds, by confounding itself with the active principle, gets entangled in the distresses of life.

93.—The motive of the Bráhman's enquiry at KÁPILA, it will be remembered, is this—that he wishes he may not be "again obnoxious to the three sorts of pain :"—in other words that he may not be born again—that he may be no more liable to transmigration or the Metempsychosis. Of the Metempsychosis Prof. Wilson (Sánkhya Káriká p. x.) says:—"This belief is not "to be looked upon as a mere popular superstition; it is the main "principle of all Hindú metaphysics; it is the foundation of all "Hindú philosophy." The doctrine of the Metempsychosis may be regarded as the Hindú theory on the great question of the "origin of evil." The theory may be thus stated. Evil exists—and it is not to be supposed that evil befalls any one undeservedly. When, therefore, for example, a newborn child, who has had no opportunity of acting either rightly or wrongly, is found suffering evil, it is inferred that the evil is the fruit of evil deeds done in a former state of existence. If it be asked how the person became disposed to do evil in that former state of existence, the answer offered is this—it was the consequence of evil deeds done in a state of existence still anterior—and so on. Applying now the principle of ‘limits’—that what is true at every assignable point short of the limit, must be true at the limit—as there is no assignable point in the existence of evil in past time for its existence at which point this hypothesis does not serve equally well to account, it is argued that, on this hypothesis, and on no other, is the existence of evil fully accounted for. To the European this method of accounting for the origin of evil appears to be vitiated by the ‘regressus in infinitum’ (anavasthá)—the same consideration which vitiates the theory of the earth’s resting on the elephant, the elephant’s resting on the tortoise, and so on without end. The origin of evil he regards as not having been revealed; and the requirement that we shall maintain our reliance on the goodness of God in the absence of such revelation, he regards as a trial of our faith.

94.—Several of the terms in the treatise of which a translation has been given, do not occur in the Sánkhya treatises generally studied. On these and some other points a few annotations here follow.

95.—Among the epithets applied to ‘Self-consciousness’ (in No. 18) are sánumána and niranumána. We can get no account anywhere of this application of these terms. Self-consciousness ‘not associated with inference’ might possibly refer to the simple consciousness of existence; whilst the consciousness ‘associated with inference’ might refer to the notion of the Egoist who has reasoned himself into the belief that he himself constitutes all that is—(see No. 17) :—but then the difficulty would remain of tracing the connexion between this sense and the functions assigned to these aspects of self-consciousness under No. 61.—The technical or ‘slang’ terms in Nos. 64 &c., differ in our text-book from those given in the comment on the Kárikás—see p. 155 of the Sánkhya Káriká, where Prof. Wilson says “No explanation of the words is anywhere given, nor is any reason assigned for their adoption.”

96.—On the ‘triad of qualities’ (No. 49), Prof. Wilson, at p. 52 of the Sánkhya Káriká, remarks :—“In speaking of qualities, “ however, the term guna is not to be regarded as an insubstantial “ or accidental attribute, but as a substance discernible by soul “ through the medium of the faculties. It is, in fact, nature, or “ prakriti, in one of its three constituent parts or conditions, “ unduly prominent; nature entire, or unmodified, being nothing “ more than the three qualities in equipoise, according to the “ Sútra, ‘Prakriti is the equal state of goodness, foulness, and “ darkness.’ ”

97.—The term abhibuddhi would seen to be obsolete in the sense assigned to it in No. 58. In the copy of the work employed in making the translation, the same term (abhibuddhi) is repeated as representing the first of its own five subdivisions. This, with other obvious clerical errors, has been amended with the concurrence of learned pandits. The term karttavyatá, in the same passage, is akin to our term ‘susceptibility.’

98.—‘Inference’ is briefly noticed in paragraph No. 77. As the writers on the Sánkhya do not appear to be all exactly of the same mind on the subject of inference, it may be worth while to examine the matter :—and, as the terms which they make use of are the same as those which are employed, with less diversity of sentiment, by the Naiyáyikas, it may be as well to begin by determining the sense in which the Naiyáyikas understand the terms.

99.—After describing ‘perception,’ in his fourth aphorism, GAUTAMA, the founder of the Nyáya school, proceeds, in his fifth aphorism, to speak of ‘inference’ as follows :—

अथ तत्पूर्वकं चिविधमनुमानं पूर्ववच्छेष्वत्सामान्यतो हृष्ट-
च । ५ ।

“Now ‘inference,’ preceded thereby [i. e., preceded by ‘perception’] is of three kinds—(1) that which has the ‘prior’—(2) that which has the ‘posterior’—and (3) that which is [or consists in] the perception of ‘community.’”

100.—‘Inference,’ as stated in paragraph No. 77 of our textbook, is “knowledge arising from the perception of a ‘sign;’” and as the ‘sign’ (linga)—the Greek σημεῖον or rather τεμνητικόν—the “mark from which a conclusion may be drawn”—may be of three kinds; so the modes of ‘inference,’ as stated in the aphorism of Gautama, are likewise three.

101.—The first kind of ‘sign’ Gautama calls ‘prior’ (púrvava). The meaning of the term is explained by his commentator (in the Nyáya-sútra-vritti) as follows :—

पूर्वं कारणं । तद्वत् तज्ज्ञकं । यथा मेघोऽन्तिविशेषेण हृ-
ष्टनुमानं ।

“[By the expression in the aphorism] ‘prior’ [is meant] cause—[a cause being prior to, or the antecedent of, its effect—and, when perceived, serving as a ‘sign’ of the effect yet unperceived]. [By the expression in the aphorism] ‘which has that’ [i. e., which has the ‘prior,’ or cause—is meant] which has that as a ‘sign’.

As (for example) the inference of rain from the circumstance of the gathering of clouds."

In this example of inference, the 'prior' (púrvva)—the antecedent or cause—is the 'sign';—the gathering of clouds, the antecedent or cause of rain, being that 'sign' from which a fall of rain is inferred by anticipation. By European writers, this kind of inference is named, in terms strictly corresponding to those of the Nyáya, inference 'a priori' [i. e. the inference of the consequent from the antecedent].

102.—The second kind of 'sign' Gautama calls 'posterior' (s'esha). The meaning of the term is explained by his commentator as follows:—

शेषः कार्यं । तस्मिन्कं शेषतः । यथा नदीष्वल्ला दृश्यनुमानं ।

"[By the expression in the aphorism] 'posterior' [is meant] effect [—an effect being posterior to, or the consequent of, its cause—and, when perceived, serving as a 'sign' of the cause which was unperceived]. [By the expression in the aphorism] 'which has the posterior' [is meant—inference] which has that ['posterior' or consequent] as a 'sign.' As [for example] the inference of rain from the swelling of a river".

In this example of inference, the 'posterior' (s'esha)—the consequent or effect—is the 'sign';—the swelling of a river—the consequent or effect of rain—being the 'sign' from which a fall of rain is inferred to have gone before. By European writers, this kind of inference is named, in terms strictly corresponding to those of the Nyáya, the inference 'a posteriori' [i. e., the inference of the antecedent from the consequent].

103.—The third kind of 'sign' Gautama calls 'the perception of community' (sámányato drishṭa). The import of the term is explained by his commentator as follows:—

सामान्यता इष्टं कार्यकारणभिन्नसिद्धकं । वया पृथिवीत्वेन
प्रव्यत्वानुमानं ।

“[By inference from] ‘the perception of community’ [is meant inference] where the ‘sign’ is other than effect or cause. As [for example] the inferring that something is a substance from its having the nature of earth”.

In this example the sámánya or ‘generic character’ termed prithivítva ‘earthiness’ is a ‘sign’ from which, when perceived, ‘substantiality’—neither the cause nor the effect, but, in this instance, the higher genus—is inferred. The definition applies also to ‘inference from analogy’, as the term sámányato drishṭa has been rendered.

104.—The commentator from whom we have quoted mentions another opinion in regard to the names of the three kinds of inference ;—that they refer to those three kinds of ‘signs’ (specified in page 38 of the ‘Lectures on the Nyáya Philosophy’)—viz., the ‘sign’ which is in every case present ; that which is absent in every case but one ; and that which is present in some cases and absent in others. This notion—apparently originating in nothing much deeper than the consideration that there are “three to three”—may be dismissed as barely on a level with Captain Fluellen’s parallel between Harry of Monmouth and Alexander of Macedon, (in ‘King Henry V’—Act iv—sc. 7.), based on the consideration that “There is a river in Macedon ; and there is also moreover a river at Moamouth”.

105.—Of the three examples given in our text-book (No. 77) the first—viz : the inferring of ‘rain from the assembling of clouds,’ falls under the first division (—see No. 101.). The second example—the inferring that ‘there is water because there are cranes &c.’, exemplifies the second division—(see No. 102)—the presence of the cranes and such-like waterfowl being consequent on the presence of the water which these birds frequent. The third example—the inferring of ‘fire from smoke’—(which the author of the Sánkhya Pravachana Bháshya refers to the first class)—falls under the same head as the second—smoke being met with only where there has been fire as an antecedent. The selection of examples here therefore is unsatisfactory—being at once redundant and defective.

106.—In the 5th and 6th of the ‘Memorial Verses’, inference is spoken of as follows :—

चिविधमनुमानमाख्यातं
तप्तिष्ठलिप्तिपूर्वकं
सामान्यतस्य इष्टादतीन्द्रियानां प्रतीतिरनुमानात् ।

Thus rendered by Mr. Colebrooke—

“Inference, which is of three sorts, premises an argument, and (deduces) that which is argued by it.” * * * * “it is by inference (or reasoning) that acquaintance with things transcending the senses is obtained :”—

[Professor Wilson prefers rendering the latter clause thus :—“It is by reasoning from analogy that belief in things beyond the senses is attained.”]

107.—The remarks of the scholiast GAUDAPÁDA (in the Sánkhya Bháshya) on the foregoing text are as follows :—

चिविधमनुमानमाख्यातं शेषवत् पूर्ववत् सामान्यतो इष्टं चेति ।
पूर्वस्थास्योति पूर्ववद् यथा नेत्रोऽन्त्या इष्टिं साधयति पूर्व-

“ Inference, which is of three kinds, takes the name of ‘that which has the consequent’ (see No. 99), ‘that which has the antecedent,’ and ‘that which is [or consists in] the perception of Community.’ ‘That which has the antecedent,’ is that [form of inference] where [it is argued]—‘That [which we are adducing as the sign] is the antecedent of this [which we wish to establish] :’—as, for example, when one proves [an approaching fall of] rain by the rising of clouds—because this [rising of clouds] is an antecedent of rain. [As an example of inference] ‘which has the consequent’—[suppose that] having found a drop of water taken from the sea to be salt, the saltiness of the rest also is inferred. ‘Analogous’—as, having observed their change of place, it is concluded that the moon and stars are locomotive like CHAITRA : that is, having seen a person named CHAITRA transfer his position from one place to another, and thence having known that he was locomotive, it is inferred that the moon and stars also are locomotive. So too, observing a mango tree in blossom, one establishes the fact that other mango trees also are in flower [not by adducing, in proof of the fact either, the cause of the fact or any consequence of the fact—but] by remarking the common nature [of the mango tree under inspection—in virtue of which common nature the other mango trees blossom simultaneously with it.] Such is [inference by means of] 'the perception of Community.'

Again [the words] tallingga púrvvakam &c., [may be rendered otherwise :—thus] tad 'that'—viz., 'inference'—linggapúrvvaka 'where, from a characteristic, that which possesses the characteristic is inferred,' as, [one is inferred to be] a mendicant from his staff [when his staff is of the characteristic description carried by mendicants]. And [the act of inference may be said to be] linggipúrvvaka, 'where, from what possesses a characteristic, the characteristic itself is inferred,' as, having seen a mendicant, you say, this [which he holds in his hand, and which, from distance or some other reason, is not clearly discernible in his grasp] is his triple staff—[for where the mendicant presents himself, there his characteristic staff is sure to be found also]."

Now, in his example of inferring the saltiness of the ocean from the saltiness of a drop taken from it, GAUPAPÁDA appears to have been misled by the ambiguity of the word s'esha, which the Naiyáyikas employ as the opposite of púrva—the opposition intended being that of antecedent, and consequent not that of part and remainder. GAUPAPÁDA, taking the word in its familiar sense of 'the rest,' imagines that when we infer the rest of the ocean to be salt like a drop taken from it, the process falls under the second head in the division of the modes of inference, whereas it falls under the third head—the same which he exemplifies by the case of the mango-trees. As we infer that other mango-trees blossom when one mango-tree blossoms, because all mango-trees have one common nature; so likewise do we infer that the other drops of the ocean are salt, when we find that one drop is salt, because all the drops in the ocean have one common nature. Thus, whilst our anonymous commentator on KAPILA gives two examples of the second kind and no example of the third, GAUPAPÁDA gives two examples of the third kind and none of the second. For the illustration of KAPILA, therefore, some of his commentators would appear, by these discrepancies, to have borrowed the terminology of the Nyáya without considering themselves bound to adhere to the sense assigned to the terms by the inventors. Whether the writers on the Sánkhya, as has been suggested, intended, by their peculiar application of the terms of the Nyáya, to inculcate their own tenet of the indifference of cause and effect, is a point the consideration of which we remit to another occasion.
